Aitken Jardine

Aitken was previously a secondary Mathematics and Science Teacher, and is now an Advisory Visiting Teacher - Vision Impairment, on the Sunshine Coast. He works as part of the student support team, assisting schools to build support capacity for learners who are blind or have low vision. He also assists with the development of Expanded Core Curriculum skills in students. Aitken currently has a role with the Statewide Vision Impairment Services, developing support for students in senior mathematical courses.

Accessible Mathematics for Students with Visual Impairments (Secondary)

Secondary mathematics education relies significantly on visual support to develop conceptual understanding. Consequently, mathematical progression can be severely stymied for students who are blind or have low vision. As an integral component of STEM subjects, mathematical development is crucial to ensure every student has equitable opportunity to access, and succeed in associated senior secondary courses.

Gain an insight into the challenges faced by these students in secondary mainstream settings while developing knowledge in a range of adjustments, strategies and resources for mathematical education.
