Rex Boggs

I graduated from the University of Wyoming in June 1972 with a double major in Mathematics, and started my teaching career in Junee, NSW in September of that year. Since then I have taught in Melbourne, Papua New Guinea, New York City (as a consultant in NYC middle schools) and Rockhampton, where I was Head of Mathematics and Informatics for 21 years. I have always had a strong interest in Maths education, as evidenced by my involvement on numerous Maths education email lists (and now Facebook sites). I was awarded a QAMT Life Membership in 2012.

Ten Top Tips To Transform Teaching

I semi-retired from teaching Maths in 2015. But I still have a passion for Maths and teaching Maths, and since then I have had the time to read over 30 inspiring books on teaching and/or Maths. Today I will share ten research-based approaches to teaching Maths which I learned from these, and which have the potential to transform how we teach Maths.
